Baptism of Christ

Lorenzo Ghiberti, Baptism of Christ, [1427] Baptistry, Siena

From the 4th century until the 9th century adult baptism with full immersion was the norm and as many people were baptised together, a baptistry was constructed close to the cathedral (because you had to be baptised in order to enter the sacred building). As infant baptism became the standard, baptistries were no longer built. However, in 12th century Italy, with the rise of civic pride, the baptistry began to be a feature in cities such as Siena, Pisa, Florence. Dedicated to St John the Baptist, the Sieneese baptistry was designed to incorporate gilded bronze panels commissioned from the most gifted artists of the day. Ghiberti's panel, carved in low relief and showing the Baptism of Christ is wonderfully expressive and elegant. God leans out at the top, bestowing the blessing with which Jesus begins his ministry. Blessings, Mother Cherry
